GRAPE JUICE

The Diplomatic Drink

It is the sweet juice of a luscious New York grapes, with a fruity bouquet. Its clear, ruby-red color is good to look upon, but that is a virtue more than eye-deep—it means freedom from sediment and pulp. The taste of it is never bitter or astringent.

CARPENTER WITH COIFFURE IN CITY COURT

His Locks Caught Up With Hairpins, Orr Protests in Soprano Tones That He Is Not a Woman.

J. M. Orr faced Judge George B. Craig in the police court this morning to answer to a charge of vagrancy, with his hair caught up neatly with hairpins.

Orr gave his name in soprano tones and Chief of Police McMullen looked up from the record book with a jerk. He gave a look at a feminine knot of hair at the back of Orr's head as he demanded:

"What are you—a woman or a man?"

Orr denied femininity. He said he was an able-bodied carpenter, had been at work at Grand Canyon and was on his way to Las Vegas. He used hairpins on his hair, he said, because it was long enough to warrant it.

Judge Craig fined him $10, and suspended sentence on condition that he go to Las Vegas without loss of time. Orr patted his coiffure, pushed in a loose hairpin and went his way.

HUTCHINS HEARING PUT OFF UNTIL TOMORROW

James Hutchins' hearing on a charge of passing a worthless check was put off again today, at his request. The case is set for tomorrow before Justice George B. Craig. Two more alleged bad checks offered by Hutchins have been reported to the police, making three in all. They represent $60 altogether.

GARCIA IN TROUBLE FOR OBLIGING AN INDIAN

He Got a Thirsty Isleta a Jug of Wine, and Now He Must Answer to United States Grand Jury.

For being obliging to a ward of the government Nick Garcia of San Jose is in serious trouble with Uncle Sam. He was held last evening for the United States grand jury on a charge of furnishing liquor to an Indian.

Garcia was arraigned before United States Commissioner George B. Craig at the latter's office. The evidence was to the effect that Juan Trinidad Zunil, a thirsty Isleta Indian, approached Garcia outside a saloon near San Jose, and got his aid in killing the thirst. He gave Garcia a jug and four bits, Zunil said, and Garcia went into the saloon and got him a jugful of wine. When the United States government heard that it had a fit, and Garcia was seized forthwith.

Commissioner Craig fixed the prisoner's bond at $500.

RODEY ENTERS RACE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION TO CONGRESS

Former Delegate and Man Who Drew Greatest Majority Ever Given a Republican Candidate Out to Win.

DEMANDS PARTY CALL A STATE-WIDE PRIMARY

In Ringing Announcement Albuquerque Man Asks His Party to Discard Bosses and Gumshoe Methods.

Following close upon the news in the Herald last night that William H. Andrews had permitted himself to be persuaded to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress to the fall election, came a ringing announcement this morning from Judge Bernard S. Rodey, twice delegate in congress from New Mexico under the territory, former federal judge in Porto Rico, former United States district attorney at Nome, Alaska, and one of the strongest men in his party in the state.

This makes a total of three Albuquerque men who are not only candidates for the Republican nomination, but who are determined to make a fight to a finish for it. They are, in the order of their formal entrance into the Republican arena, Elfrigo Baca, W. H. Andrews and B. S. Rodey.

In his announcement to the party published in the Herald this evening Judge Rodey formally demands that the Republican managers call a statewide primary for the selection of the candidate for congress, so that the will of the people may be expressed and the nomination given to the man desired by the rank and file, and not by the bosses. Declaring against the fixing of the nomination by "gumshoe" methods, Mr. Rodey demands that the Republican voters of the state be consulted at first hand by means of the statewide primary.

Judge Rodey will prove a formidable candidate for the nomination without a statewide primary. Should such a primary by any chance be called by the Republican bosses, there are many who believe he would be certain to win, for his acquaintance in the state is enormous and his popularity with the rank and file of the party great.

His distinction of having drawn the largest majority ever given a Republican candidate for congress. In his first race for the delegate's job he was elected by 4,000 majority. In the second race he rolled up the enormous plurality of 10,000 votes. Ready to be elected the third time, Rodey had a majority of the votes in the convention held in this city which nominated Andrews. It is to this event that Judge Rodey refers when he speaks of gumshoe methods. Andrews with the backing of the then Governor Miguel A. Otero came into Albuquerque and the night before the convention secured a majority of the delegates from Rodey to Andrews. Ever since that time, after serving out his term in congress, Mr. Rodey as judge or prosecutor has been in the service of the federal government, until quite recently, when on the change of national administration he returned to Albuquerque to resume the practice of law. At that time he let his close friends know that he was going to seek the Republican nomination for congress and if there is one scalp in the Republican party that the Judge wants to get it is that of W. H. Andrews. His entrance into the race makes the Republican effort the most interesting from the standpoint of the spectator that has existed in years.

Judge Rodey was a capable delegate in congress. He had the largest personal acquaintance of any man in that body, knowing personally every man in both houses and practically every man in the government service in Washington from the White House down the line. He got results for his constituents. Under his guidance the site for the Albuquerque federal building was chosen and purchased and he gave the state enormous advertising in course of his fight for statehood, which so far as a delegate could do it, he won on two occasions.

After his retirement from congress he served as federal judge in Porto Rico where he prepared four volumes of reports which have received high commendation from the United States supreme bench. In Alaska his judicial experience was added to by wide experience as a prosecutor.

"I am in this race to win," said Judge Rodey this morning, "and I do not intend to be beaten out of the nomination by any gumshoe methods if I can help it. I demand and I want the rank and file of Republicans to demand that the Republican state committee call a statewide primary to which the names of all candidates be submitted. I am willing to take my chances with such a contest. I am ready for it at any time, provided the people and not the bosses do the choosing. I do not want to see this nomination stolen by gumshoe methods."

"I was reminded in reading the political news in the Herald last night of an incident that happened years ago in Albuquerque when a lady bought a fine armchair from a local store and had it delivered to her house during the middle of the afternoon while she was entertaining a large number of friends. A card was attached to the chair on which was written, 'To Mrs. Blank from an admiring friend.' Mrs.

Blank promptly threw a fit and exclaimed in surprise and rapture, 'Now, who do you suppose could have sent me that isn't it lovely?' "This kind of public approval can be had in any quantity at any time. What we want, and what I believe the rank and file of Republicans in this state in the choice to choose their candidate for congress in the open; to have a vote in the choosing, and the one who only fair and above board way to do this is by a statewide primary. I am perfectly willing to take my chances in such a primary with everyone else. I hope that my friends and Republicans generally will join me in urging this fair and honorable course on the state committee."

MRS. KING MADE ADMINISTRATRIX OF HUSBAND'S ESTATE

Copy of the decree of the Lewis H. King will case, in which the district court ruled that King died intestate, was filed in the probate court today in the original attempt to break the will in the probate court. Mrs. King failed. Judge John Baron Burg being guided by the testimony brought out in that court. In the district court, Mrs. King established the fact that the witnesses to the will did not see her husband sign it, and Judge Raymond threw the instrument out. Under the will Mrs. King would have been forced to remain unmarried to insure income under a trust fund, and an aim of Mr. King's would have been to secure a liberal bequest.

On Mrs. King's petition Judge Burg appointed her administratrix of her husband's estate. Bond was fixed at $5,000.

EXPERT COMING TO REPAIR CRIPPLED AUTO FIRE ENGINE

Frank Raynes, an expert in the employ of the American-La France company, is coming here from the company's factory at Elmira, N. Y., to put a new crankshaft on the automobile fire engine. The shaft broke several days ago while the apparatus was on an "exercise" spin.

Chief Klein wired for a new shaft. Yesterday he received a telegram announcing Raynes' coming and instructions to do nothing in the way of repair until the expert's arrival. The company is said to have a new and stronger type of crankshaft, and Raynes will probably put that on the apparatus.

WIFEBEATER GOES TO JAIL FOR THIRTY DAYS

Gregorio Murria, of Old Albuquerque, was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail by Justice A. J. Garcia today, for beating his wife. Yesterday, when Murria learned that a complaint had been sworn out against him he announced that he would kill the first officer who attempted to arrest him. Deputy Sheriff Querino Cuellar got him. He didn't put up any fight.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Here's Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Faded Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and straggly, just an application of two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

DR. ALLEN'S LIFE JOB

By CASPAR JOHNSON.

When the maid opened the door in response to Hollander's tug at the bell, he walked into the little consultation room and unannounced herself comfortably in a chair near the window.

"Tell Doctor Allen I'd like to see her at once, if you will," he said pleasantly. "No! Never mind the name. Just a patient."

As the maid withdrew Hollander glanced about the room. Everywhere were medical books and technical magazines. A grinning skull and a yellowed femur reposed on the mantel piece, and on a neighboring table was a sealed jar containing a human brain. Hollander grinned in disgust. He was loathe to associate Cecelia Allen with these things. The idea of a woman in vading the professions—especially such women as Cecelia—was extremely distasteful to his mind. He rose and crossing the room, stood before a framed diploma, reading its Latin phrases, which announced with all the ponderous dignity of steel engraving and crinkled parchment, that Cecelia Madison Allen was a full-fledged M. D.

Standing thus, with his back to the door, he did not see Cecelia enter the room.

"Good afternoon," she said, in her best professional manner.

Hollander turned.

"Hello, Cecelia," he said with cheerful informality.

"Oh, it's only you," she said.

"Well," he said in challenge, "can't I have troubles as well as anyone else? Haven't I as much right as the next man to summon medical aid?"

"Did you really come for medical advice?" she asked.

"I really did," he asserted gravely. "Can't sleep. Worry all the time. Lost my good nature and feel broken up generally."

"Indigestion," she declared. "Aren't you smoking too much?"

"Your diagnosis is all wrong," said he. "The trouble is with my heart."

"Indeed!" she said, frowning slightly.

"Even so," he affirmed. "And what is more, it's a bad case."

Cecelia's frown deepened.

"You'd better consult a specialist," she advised.

"You're the only one who would understand the case," he said. "Do you suppose I want to go to a specialist and tell him I'm troubled with an obstinate case of unrequited affection?"

"So that's it," she said wearily.

"Yes, that's it," he returned. "I know of only two methods of treatment—matrimony or cold poison."

"I don't approve of either," she said.

"I don't fancy the cold poison myself," he admitted.

"You didn't come here to propose again, did you?" she asked coldly.

"I came here to ask you honestly if you're satisfied with this sort of thing; if you really and truly are making a success of it?" said he.

Cecelia glared at him.

"You're very brave," she said sarcastically.

"I know it," said he, "but with all my nonsense I'm in earnest for once. I want to be sure, above all things, that you are happy and contented. If your profession is more than anything else in the world to you, I want you to make the biggest kind of a success of it. That is why I came," he ended quietly.

Cecelia toyed with a paper-weight, but said nothing.

"I've waited patiently and hoped in vain," she went on, "but now I'm becoming convinced you really mean what you say about your life work. I want to satisfy myself today that you're thoroughly sincere, and if you are, I won't trouble you further. I'll take myself off and mope it out alone."

"My profession means very much to me," she mused thoughtfully.

"More than anything else in the world?" he asked eagerly.

"More than—than most anything else," she said.

"More than anything?" he persisted.

"Does it mean more than a home—such a home as I can give you?"

At that juncture the bell rang and the maid tapped on the door.

"Some one to see you, Doctor Allen," she said.

Cecelia excused herself and took her caller into the little office at the rear of the consultation room. After a time she came back. Her face was red and her professional repose seemed somewhat disturbed.

"Cured him so soon?" Hollander laughed.

"He's incurable," she said shortly.

"What's his ailment?" Hollander inquired.

"Chronic cupidity," she said. "It was the rent collector."

Hollander turned to her quickly.

"Look here, Cecelia," he said, "you don't mean—"

She nodded miserably.

"I've had just one patient—and that a charity patient—since I've been here," she confessed. "I'm strapped—broke—insolvent," she ended tragically.

"Is the profession worth all this struggle?" said Hollander.

"No," she said hotly, "it isn't. I'm tired of it all, and, Ted, I want that home—if I'm not too late in applying."

Hollander caught her in his arms.

"I'll give you a life job of curing that heart trouble," he declared jubilantly.

THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH OF BAND INSTRUMENTS

Indian Department Supplies Complete New Equipment of Instruments for Albuquerque Indian School Boys.

CAR LOAD OF OIL GOES ON WALKS AND ROADS

Superintendent Perry of the Indian school is swelling with pride in his school band these days because of their creditable performance during the closing exercises of the school, and he was further delighted yesterday afternoon to receive a telegram from Washington advising him of the shipment to Albuquerque of an entire new equipment of instruments for the organization, of the very best makes and costing $999.34. The Indian school band has been improving steadily for several years until it now is in frequent demand for functions in Albuquerque in which it always acquits itself splendidly. About $50 worth of new and up-to-date music comes with the new instruments.

Oiling Roads and Walks.

A thorough experiment with oil for roads is being made by Superintendent Perry on the school grounds. He recently purchased a carload of road oil from California and with this has covered all the roads and dirt walks in the grounds. Mr. Perry had considered paying for some of the most used drives, but was advised to try oil as less expensive and as satisfactory both in use and appearance.

New Industrial Superintendent.

George J. Robertson, for many years in the Indian school service and an experienced industrial man, has come to Albuquerque from the San Juan school in the Navajo reservation to become superintendent of industries at the local school. He arrived the first of the week.

SANTA FE WILL PUT CHAPERONES ON ITS TRAINS

The Santa Fe Railway company will establish on its through California trains July 1 chaperones for the girls and young women who are forced to travel alone. Found parents in Chicago, Kansas City and other points who want to send their daughters to California, or the parents in California who want to send their daughters to eastern schools, can put their child in the care of the chaperon at their home station and feel certain that the daughter will arrive safely at the end of the Santa Fe line.

The chaperones will be paid by the railroad company and will be women specially trained for the work. Girls placed in their care will be under the supervision of the chaperones throughout the trip. The chaperones will not be placed on all trains at the beginning, but will be on trains running regularly on certain days.
